Description

Right now, if a user makes a mistake in the registration process (such as a mistyped email), there's no feedback for them. The user waits for a while, then gives up if the email hasn't appeared - though they may eventually email the administrators. It would be useful to have either:

- better reporting of smtp errors for the user
- display of the email that is being registered at some point during the registration process.

It seems that waldo already provides this... anything more is up to the template designers.
